Dear Lorraine,

I wanted to express my gratitude for your encouragement and support in telling my personal story in the fall 2010 issue. You have an extraordinary way with words and a real gift for bringing out the best in people. You bring women together to learn from each other, support each other and to encourage each other to follow their dreams and passions. Telling my story was an exercise in trust and intimacy. Something I had to work hard on in order to heal from past hurts and betrayals. You have helped me heal and overcome a part of my life that was standing in the way of me really living a full life. For that I am eternally grateful. If sharing my story has helped another woman see that she can overcome anything with persistence, and what we focus on becomes our reality, then it was well worth being so vulnerable in telling it. I let everyone know about the great work that you are doing to help empower women and your new venture into franchising your magazine. I admire you and know that you will only continue to touch lives. God bless you and continued success.

Love
